

Case Review: The Impossible Case

Morales Injury Law was referred a case by another law firm in Las Vegas. The client had been with three law firms before being referred to Morales Injury Law.

The client had been rear ended while sitting in a parking lot. The client received treatment for about 4 months. The client's medical bills were substantial and the available policy limits were $50,000.

Each law firm attempted to resolve the client's case and each law firm received the dreaded "low-impact case" letter.

The day after the client retained Morales Injury Law, we filed a Complaint in the Eighth Judicial District Court. Less than 2 weeks later the insurance company reached out to Morales Injury Law and offered to pay for the client's medical bills.

We refused that offer and countered with a demand for well above policy limits. In less than a day, we settled the case and were able to hand our client a substantial check.

Did you know?
Insurance companies often characterize collisions as "low impact" to devalue the case.

What Should I Do: Hit-and-Run Collision

Picture this scenario. You're driving your car down the road, minding your business and obeying the law.

Next thing you know, you feel a violent collision and hear tires screeching, metal crumpling, and glass breaking.

You compose yourself, check on your family, and get out of the car to exchange information with the other driver. You see the other car driving away.

First, call the police. The police will create a Traffic Accident Report and document the scene.

Second, document the scene and incident. It's best to write notes in your phone. Location, time, weather condition. You should also take photos and video of your car and the surrounding area.

Third, contact Morales Injury Law as soon as you can. Our staff has experience handling hit-and-run claims.

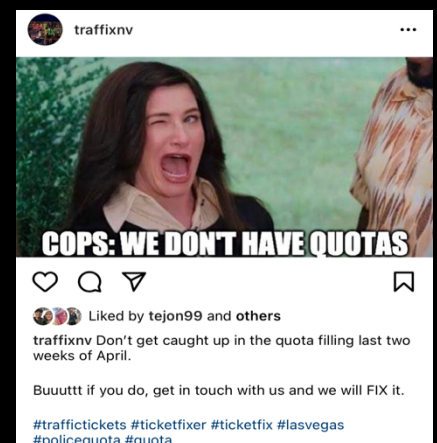

Did you know?
The penalty for causing a collision and leaving the scene can vary from 6 months - 20 years in prison and thousands in fines.

Morales Injury Law is proud to announce the formation of our traffic ticket fixing department! We will let our marketing director take over from here.
